As the likes of Apple and Dropbox have demonstrated, finding the magic formula for an all-encompassing photo service isn't easy. Google is having a harder time, and screenshots of the app has a clean and straightforward layout that fits in with Google's other mobile apps. A new dedicated home on the web will be introduced too.It looks like the emphasis is on automation. Your pictures will be tagged automatically, for example, so you can quickly pull up photos of the cat or a camping trip without having to label them all yourself. The integrated editing tools will get some spit and polish too.We shouldn't have long to wait before all this becomes official: we're expecting Google to unveil its newly improved Photos app at some point during Google I/O, which starts later this week.Google looks set to split Photos from Google+ Apply text and logo watermarks with PhotoMarks Watermarks are a quick way of protecting your photos from theft as well as getting your name seen. There are many photo apps (opens in new tab) out there you can use to add customisable watermarks to your online pics, but this new app from Bits&Coffee (opens in new tab) promises to make it easier than ever.Photomarks 2 (opens in new tab) is a universal iOS app which can apply text and logo watermarks to images on Instagram, Facebook and Twitter. It also applies to photos shared via email.Your watermark can be any image from your device, and with the option to customise the size, shape and transparency of your logo you can get the exact look you want.Simple controls let you adjust your watermark's appearance By working on multiple layers you can edit mistakes or redo actions without affecting the original picture, plus they can be saved in full resolution. Photomarks 2 is available now to download from iTunes (opens in new tab).Liked this? Read these! Thank you for reading 5 articles this month! Join now for unlimited access!
