Dialogue and Punctuation

Notes

- Quotation marks are used to indicate direct speech.
Example: "I want to visit Australia. And I plan to visit in France," said Amy.
- The first word after a quotation mark is capitalized.
Example: "The teacher explained," "My teacher asked."
- Punctuation marks at the end of the dialogue go inside the quotation marks.
Example: "Let's go home," said John.
- A comma is used to separate the speaker from the dialogue by the person who is speaking.
Example: "Here are your books now," said the teacher. She then explained, "I'll give you back."

Rules for Punctuating Dialogue

DIALOGUE	SPEECH TAG
Dialogue is what the person says. Quotation marks go around the dialogue. One at the beginning and one at the end.	The speech tag tells us who is talking. Sometimes the speech tag can be before the dialogue, in between, or after dialogue.
If the dialogue is a statement, a comma separates the dialogue and speech tag. "Thank you for your help," Ken said.
If the dialogue is a question, a question mark separates the dialogue and the speech tag. "Will you please help me?" Ken asked.
If the dialogue is said with excitement, an exclamation point separates the dialogue and the speech tag. "I need your help now!" Ken exclaimed.
