Sarina Wiegman said: This is an important international window for us and I cant wait to get back together at St. Georges Park. The players and staff worked hard to automatically secure our place in next summers EURO, allowing all of our focus and attention to now go into making sure were ready for the tournament when it begins on 2 July. Qualifying directly for the finals provides us with a very valuable opportunity to play four friendlies this autumn and lay the foundations for next summer. Weve been able to carefully select our opponents and weve got two exciting and different challenges this window. To play Germany at Wembley Stadium is very special and its so important that we get experience of executing our style of play against top opponents. Then South Africa in Coventry, a city and a stadium we know well, will test us in different ways. They showed in the World Cup in 2023 how quickly they are progressing and the high level they are at now. Well need to be at our very best on both evenings. The fans are always so brilliant whenever we play and tickets are still available for both games, so wed love as much support as possible and another two memorable atmospheres.The Lionesses bring their 2024 campaign to a close against Olympic champions USA at Wembley Stadium on Saturday 30 November [17.20], before playing next summers EURO hosts Switzerland at Bramall Lane, the home of Sheffield United and scene of the Lionesses memorable EURO 2022 semi-final, on Tuesday 3 December [19.45]. With tickets available for both fixtures here. The UEFA Womens Nations League draw on Thursday 7 November will determine Englands opponents in the first half of 2025, with the UEFA Womens EURO draw taking place on Monday 16 December. Both teams received a share of the spoils with the Lionesses triumphing 1-0 at Leicester City before succumbing to a 3-2 defeat in Leuven. Wiegman said: Its good for us to be back together so quickly after a positive start to this year. We have a lot we want to achieve in the Nations League and although we are satisfied with our start in the group, theres much more work to be done to improve our game. After two very difficult fixtures against them in 2023 we know the challenge Belgium will pose. We will need to be fully focused and perform at our best to get the two results we are looking for.Im looking forward to getting the players together and continuing the hard work on the grass at St. Georges Park before travelling to Bristol. It will be a pleasure to return back to Ashton Gate, its a stadium that brings back happy memories and a crowd who gave us great support in 2023. To play in front of a sell-out crowd is not something we will ever take for granted and Im sure their backing will provide us with the extra energy we need and hopefully help us secure three important points. All selected were involved in the UEFA Womens Nations League fixtures against Portugaland Spain this past fortnight, along with the returning Lauren James.The squad includes 13 players who made history in lifting the trophy in 2022. Seven players Michelle Agyemang, Aggie Beever-Jones, Grace Clinton, Khiara Keating, Maya Le Tissier,Anna Moorhouse and Jess Park will be appearing at their first major tournament. In contrast, Lucy Bronzeis set for her seventh major tournament and her fourth consecutive EURO. Notably, 22 of the 23-player squad have been capped for the Young Lionesses at development team level. England head to Switzerland this summer for the UEFA Women's EURO Discussing her selection, Wiegman said: I know this is an exciting day, for the players and also for our fans and it underlines that the tournament is coming soon."Telling the players they have made the squad is always a great moment. They will all give everything to help us make the country proud. This group is a very well-balanced mix of players with multiple tournaments on their CVs and also those that will make their tournament debuts. I am excited to see what we are capable of this summer.At the same time, I do feel for those that have just missed out. I can only name 23 but there are more players who have been so important to us on our journey to Switzerland. We would not be here without them.As we look forward, we still have a month to go until we play the first game. After some important rest, we will all be working really hard to make sure we are ready to go on 5 July.
