RE: Character Reference for [Name of Friend]

Your Honor,

The aim of this letter is to present the good character of [Name of Friend]. We have worked together for the past 5 years as nurses in the [Name of Hospital]. I can confirm that she is careful, considerate, efficient and dedicated to the well-being of others. She has received several honors for her dedication to her work including Nurse of the Year for three consecutive years.

She is well-regarded among all the staff at the hospital as a person of high integrity and honesty. We have been together in several emergency situations, and she has always conducted herself with common sense and compassion.

I am aware that she has pleaded guilty to DUI. However, I wish to express that she is not a habitual drinker, and this unfortunate situation was most probably one-of-a-kind. She has expressed to me many times that she is extremely sensitive to her transgression and is sorry for it.

I hope this letter will give you an idea of her good character and help her get a second chance to prove this was an unusual occurrence.

Thank you for taking the time to read this letter.

Sincerely,

Respected authorities

I, Henry Jobs am writing this letter to you to provide a character reference about Mr. Tim White, who I know as a friend and as a colleague for a period of 7 years. I provide this reference in full knowledge of Mr. White's charge of possessing prohibited drug(ecstasy).

I can say it with total confidence that few men have contributed to the society in a way that Mr. White has. Even though I came into his association through work but I have also known him outside it. Apart from being the brand manager at Gregson Fashion, he was also the manager at Social Activism Organization and used to attend to it on the weekends. He is a kind, polite and I have never seen him even close to the influence of drugs.

I believe that there has been a confusion regarding the drug possession and can vouch for the right character of Mr. White.

Thanking you
Henry Jobs

If you are found guilty of a crime by a jury or if you plead guilty to a criminal offense, a judge will look at the facts of the case as well as your criminal history in determining a sentence. Tips for an Effective Character Letter A good character letter can be incredibly helpful to a defendant's case. Check with the attorney before making a request for a specific punishment, in order to maintain your credibility as a writer. The only exception is if the letter is written by a child. A story will stand out in the judge's mind more than adjectives will, making your letter more effective. These tips from an experienced Lexington criminal defense attorney can help your loved ones as they draft character letters in support of you. Doing this will not help the defendant, and may even negatively impact his case. For this reason, character letters should be carefully drafted in order to maximize their utility. If the person knows the defendant in a professional capacity, the introductory paragraph can explain that relationship. I am writing this letter to offer a more complete picture of who _____ is as a person." In this way, you can show respect for the criminal justice system while demonstrating to the court that your loved one may deserve a reduced sentence. Third Paragraph: Thank the court, and make your "ask." State that you are available to confirm the facts in this letter as necessary. Instead, focus on telling a story about the defendant, as described above. They should be addressed either to the Honorable [FIRST NAME] [LAST NAME] or Judge [FIRST NAME] [LAST NAME]. Form character letters are not persuasive. Tip Four: Formatting Considerations Generally, the letters should be typed on 8.5 by 11-inch standard paper. In that case, a handwritten letter may be more powerful. For individuals writing character letters, the goal should be to first establish your credibility as a reference for the defendant. Phrases that you can use include saying "I respect that a jury has found _____ guilty of _____ crime. In Kentucky, there are mandatory minimums for certain crimes, such as for persistent felony offenders. Remember that the goal is to get the court to read your letter, and the easier that you make it for them to read, the better. A character letter is designed to show support for a defendant in a criminal case. Writing such a letter can be a challenge, particularly for those who are inexperienced with the criminal justice system. These letters have the potential to influence the court, and may even impact the ultimate sentence in a criminal case. Think about what makes your friend, family member or colleague more than just a "defendant," and how you can convey that to the court. One element that can often be helpful during sentencing is a character letter. Character letters should include your name, mailing address, phone number and email address so that the court can verify your information. Next, the letter should describe the defendant, in order to help the judge better understand him or her beyond the offense committed. What Is the Goal of a Character Letter? In Kentucky, sentences in criminal cases are determined by a judge. State that you respect that the defendant has been found guilty or pled guilty to a crime, and that you are writing the letter to offer a fuller picture of him or her as a person. Sample Format for a Character Letter If you have been asked to write a character letter, this simple template may be a useful guide. Tip Three: Avoid Undermining the Case It is often tempting for a person writing a character letter to discuss how the defendant isn't really guilty, how this "isn't like him," how the defendant only pleaded guilty to the crime to get a better sentence, or even how the jury got it wrong. Tip One: Setting the Stage As an initial matter, a character letter should only come from people who actually know the defendant. Of course, a character letter is only effective if it is well-written and helps the judge understand a fuller picture of the defendant. However, in some cases, a letter writer may make a sentencing request. Instead, each writer should start their character letter by discussing how long they have known the defendant and how they know the defendant. If you plan to make a specific "ask" at the end of your letter, be sure that you understand the potential sentences for the crime in question. Include specific examples of how the person has helped you or someone else, or how he or she has been a leader or an inspiration. Character letters are written by friends, family, colleagues, and others who know the defendant in criminal cases. Name of Person Making Recommendation Title of Person Making Recommendation (If Applicable) Address Phone Number Email Address To Whom It May Concern: First Paragraph: Explain who you are. This can be as simple as requesting leniency, in consideration of the defendant's exemplary history. Doing so can potentially influence the judge's decision — and help your loved one receive a more favorable sentence. Although you can put the case number on the letter, it is not necessary, as it will be submitted by the lawyer. When writing, avoid simply describing the defendant in terms like "he is loyal." Instead, tell a story about his loyalty, or how he has been an upstanding member of the community. During sentencing, a judge will typically only allow a certain number of live witnesses to testify as to a defendant's character but will accept almost any number of letters. Tip Five: Understand a Realistic Outcome At the end of a character letter, most writers make an "ask" of the court. The below guidelines can help in writing an influential character letter. Finally, the letter should be respectful, and should not undermine the defendant's case. Sincerely, Signature Read on to learn more about how to write a top-notch letter of support. Tip Two: Tell a Story The overarching message of a character message should be to tell a story about the defendant. Second Paragraph: Explain why you are writing the letter. Next, explain how you know the person that you are writing the character letter for, including how long and how well you have known them.

A character reference (or personal reference) is a brief assessment of a person provided by someone who knows them outside of work.
